PROPHET HUD

Long ago, there lived a people called 'Ad. Their wide land was full of green trees and rivers. They were very strong and built huge houses that seemed to reach up and touch the sky. But they worshipped idols they had made with their own hands, and forgot Allah, who had given them their strength and blessings.

PROPHET HUD

One day, a wise man stood among them. His name was Hud. In a calm voice, he said, "My people, why do you worship idols that cannot hear you or do anything? Worship Allah, who created you and everything around you."

PROPHET HUD

Some people listened, but many laughed at him. "Hud, we are strong!" they said. "Who could defeat us? Look at our tall palaces. We are better than everyone else!"

PROPHET HUD

Hud smiled calmly and said, "Strength is not in buildings or bodies. Allah is the strongest. He holds up the sky without pillars. Will you not think?"

PROPHET HUD

Some people began to feel curious, but most remained stubborn. They answered proudly, "If you are telling the truth, show us this punishment you speak of."

PROPHET HUD

That night, Hud sat with the small number of believers who had accepted his words. "Do not be sad," he told them. "Allah is always with His servants who believe in Him. Call upon Him and thank Him for His blessings."

The next day, the wind began to blow gently. The children felt its soft breeze as they played. But the sky looked different. Hud looked up and said, "This is a warning from Allah."

PROPHET HUD

Day after day, the wind grew stronger, but it did not harm Hud and the believers. The people of 'Ad mocked them, saying, "It is only air! We are stronger than anything."

PROPHET HUD

Suddenly, the wind changed into a fierce storm. It began to tear down palaces and uproot trees. People hid in their houses, but the wind came in from every side. Their frightened voices rose, and no one laughed any more.

PROPHET HUD

Hud and the believers had found a safe place in a nearby valley. They sat beneath a large tree, thanking Allah. Hud told them, "Do you see? True strength is not in muscles or palaces. Strength is in your hearts when they are full of faith and gratitude."

When the storm grew quiet, the sky became clear again, and the breeze gently touched the trees.

The children who had listened to the story sat imagining
the breeze. "We want our hearts to be strong with faith, like Hud's," they said.

They fell asleep peacefully, remembering that Allah loves believers who are thankful.
